Mike Paul is the Director of Construction Operations at SupplyCore Inc. A graduate of the University of Arizona, Mr. Paul has been involved in several construction-related ventures. He joined SupplyCore in 2007 to start a new construction division and to both prime and subcontract work for private and government agencies across the country. As a Project Executive, Mr. Paul is responsible for proposal preparation, estimating, budget preparation, job cost, customer correspondence, and subcontracting administration. Mr. Paul is also the lead safety manager and author of safety manuals, specifically for the construction division as well as responsible for new construction employee safety training.

Mike Paul, while employed at the Hard Dollar Corporation, gained experience in managing sales, operations and logistics for construction companies that provided the right skill set, to then present and help sell enterprise Project Lifecycle Management software to contractors, energy companies and manufacturers. He was successful in optimizing the contractor's ROI through proper configuration and value engineering as well as developing and incorporating a grading, concrete and landscape contracting company, serving apartment complexes, new and existing homes, manufactured homes and new commercial construction.
